The Ashtavakra Gita

translator's preface

The Ashtavakra Gita, or the Ashtavakra Samhita as it is sometimes called, is a very ancient Sanskrit text. Nothing seems to be known about the author, though tradition ascribes it to the Sage Ashtavakra - hence the name.

There is little doubt though that it is very old, probably dating back to the days of the classic Vedanta period. The Sanskrit style and the doctrine expressed would seem to warrant this assessment.

The work was known, appreciated and quoted by Ramakrishna and his disciple Vivekananda, as well as by Ramana Maharshi, while Radhakrishnan always refers to it with great respect. Apart from that the work speaks for itself. It presents the traditional teachings of Advaita Vedanta with a clarity and power very rarely matched.

The translation here (2nd. version) is by John Richards, and is presented to the public domain with his affection. The work has been a constant inspiration in his life for many years. May it be so for many others.

Waves, foam and bubbles do not differ from water. In the same way, all this which has emanated from oneself, is no other than oneself. 2.4
When you analyse it, cloth is found to be just thread. In the same way, when all this is analysed it is found to be no other than oneself. 2.5

The sugar produced from the juice of the sugarcane is permeated throughout with the same taste. In the same way, all this, produced out of me, is completely permeated with myself. 2.6

From ignorance of oneself, the world appears, and by knowledge of oneself it appears no longer. From ignorance of the rope it appears to be a snake, and by knowledge of it it does so no longer. 2.7

Shining is my essential nature, and I am nothing other than that. When the world shines forth, it is only me that is shining forth. 2.8

All this appears in me imagined due to ignorance, just as a snake appears in the rope, the mirage of water in the sunlight, and silver in mother of pearl. 2.9

All this, which has originated out of me, is resolved back into me too, like a jug back into clay, a wave into water, and a bracelet into gold. 2.10

How wonderful I am! Glory to me, for whom there is no destruction, remaining even beyond the destruction of the world from Brahma down to the last clump of grass. 2.11

How wonderful I am! Glory to me, solitary even though with a body, neither going or coming anywhere, I who abide forever, filling all that is. 2.12

How wonderful I am! Glory to me! There is no one so clever as me! I who have borne all that is forever, without even touching it with my body! 2.13

How wonderful I am! Glory to me! There is no one so clever as me! I who have borne all that is forever, without even touching it with my body! 2.14
How wonderful I am! Glory to me! I who possess nothing at all, or alternatively possess everything that speech and mind can refer to.

Knowledge, what is to be known, and the knower - these three do not exist in reality. I am the spotless reality in which they appear because of ignorance.

Truly dualism is the root of suffering. There is no other remedy for it than the realisation that all this that we see is unreal, and that I am the one stainless reality, consisting of consciousness.

I am pure awareness though through ignorance I have imagined myself to have additional attributes. By continually reflecting like this, my dwelling place is in the Unimagined.

For me here is neither bondage nor liberation. The illusion has lost its basis and ceased. Truly all this exists in me, though ultimately it does not even exist in me.

Recognising that all this and my body too are nothing, while my true self is nothing but pure consciousness, what is there left for the imagination to work on now?

The body, heaven and hell, bondage and liberation, and fear too, all this is pure imagination. What is there left to do for me whose very nature is consciousness?

I do not even see dualism in a crowd of people, so what do I gain if it is replaced by a desert?

I am not the body, nor is the body mine. I am not a living being. I am consciousness. It was my thirst for living that was my bondage.

Truly it is in the infinite ocean of myself, that, stimulated by the colourful waves of the world, everything suddenly arises in the wind of consciousness.

Knowing when the dualism of things done and undone has been put to rest, or the person for whom they occur has, then you can here and now go beyond renunciation and obligations by indifference to such things. 9.1

Rare indeed, my son, is the lucky man whose observation of the world's behaviour has led to the extinction of his thirst for living, thirst for pleasure and thirst for knowledge. 9.2

All this is transient and spoilt by the three sorts of pain. Knowing it to be insubstantial, ignoble and fit only for rejection, one attains peace. 9.3

When was that age or time of life when the dualism of extremes did not exist for men? Abandoning them, a person who is happy to take whatever comes attains perfection. 9.4

Who does not end up with indifference to such things and attain peace when he has seen the differences of opinions among the great sages, saints and yogis? 9.5

Is he not a guru who, endowed with dispassion and equanimity, achieves full knowledge of the nature of consciousness, and leads others out of samsara? 9.6

If you would just see the transformations of the elements as nothing more than the elements, then you would immediately be freed from all bonds and established in your own nature. 9.7

One's desires are samsara. Knowing this, abandon them. The renunciation of them is the renunciation of it. Now you can remain as you are. 9.8
Abandoning desire, the enemy, along with gain, itself so full of loss, and the good deeds which are the cause of the other two - practice indifference to everything.

Look on such things as friends, land, money, property, wife, and bequests as nothing but a dream or a magician's show lasting three or five days.

Wherever a desire occurs, see samsara in it. Establishing yourself in firm dispassion, be free of passion and happy.

The essential nature of bondage is nothing other than desire, and its elimination is known as liberation. It is simply by not being attached to changing things that the everlasting joy of attainment is reached.

You are one, conscious and pure, while all this is inert non-being. Ignorance itself is nothing, so what is the point of wanting to understand?

Kingdoms, children, wives, bodies, pleasures - these have all been lost to you life after life, attached to them though you were.

Enough of wealth, sensuality and good deeds. In the forest of samsara the mind has never found satisfaction in these.

How many births have you not done hard and painful labour with body, mind and speech. Now at last, stop!

Unmoved and undistressed, realising that being, non-being and change are of the very nature of things, one easily finds peace.
At peace, having shed all desires within, and realising that nothing exists here but the Lord, the Creator of all things, one is no longer attached to anything. 11.2

Realising that misfortune and fortune come in their own time from fortune, one is contented, one's senses under control, and does not like or dislike. 11.3

Realising that pleasure and pain, birth and death are from destiny, and that one's desires cannot be achieved, one remains inactive, and even when acting does not get attached. 11.4

Realising that suffering arises from nothing other than thought, dropping all desires one rids oneself of it, and is happy and at peace everywhere. 11.5

Realising, "I am not the body, nor is the body mine. I am awareness", one attains the supreme state and no longer remembers things done or undone. 11.6

Realising, "I alone exist, from Brahma down to the last clump of grass", one becomes free from uncertainty, pure, at peace and unconcerned about what has been attained or not. 11.7

Realising that all this varied and wonderful world is nothing, one becomes pure receptivity, free from inclinations, and as if nothing existed, one finds peace. 11.8

No benefit or loss comes to me by standing, walking or lying down, so consequently I live as I please whether standing, walking or sleeping.

I lose nothing by sleeping and gain nothing by effort, so consequently I live as I please, abandoning success and failure.

Continually observing the drawbacks of such things as pleasant objects, I live as I please, abandoning the pleasant and unpleasant.

He who by nature is empty-minded, and who thinks of things only unintentionally, is freed from deliberate remembering like one awakened from a dream.

When my desire has been eliminated, I have no wealth, friends, robber senses, scriptures or knowledge?

Realising my supreme self-nature in the Person of the Witness, the Lord, and the state of desirelessness in bondage or liberation, I feel no inclination for liberation.

The various states of one who is free of uncertainty within, and who outwardly wanders about as he pleases like an idiot, can only be known by someone in the same condition.

Liberation is distaste for the objects of the senses. Bondage is love of the senses. This is knowledge. Now do as you wish.
This awareness of the truth makes an eloquent, clever and energetic man dumb, stupid and lazy, so it is avoided by those whose aim is enjoyment.

You are not the body, nor is the body yours, nor are you the doer of actions or the reaper of their consequences. You are eternally pure consciousness, the witness, in need of nothing - so live happily.

You are eternally pure consciousness, the witness, in need of nothing - so live happily.

Desire and anger are objects of the mind, but the mind is not yours, nor ever has been. You are choiceless, awareness itself and unchanging - so live happily.

You are choiceless, awareness itself and unchanging - so live happily.

There is no need for you to be disturbed.

You may, as a learned man, indulge in wealth, activity and meditation, but your mind will still long for that which is the cessation of desire, and beyond all goals.

Everyone is in pain because of their striving to achieve something, but no-one realises it. By no more than this instruction, the fortunate one attains tranquillity.

Happiness belongs to no-one but that supremely lazy man for whom even opening and closing his eyes is a bother.

When the mind is freed from such pairs of opposites as, "I have done this", and "I have not done that", it becomes indifferent to merit, wealth, sensuality and liberation.

One man is abstemious and averse to the senses, another is greedy and attached to them, but he who is free from both taking and rejecting is neither abstemious nor greedy.

So long as desire, the state of lack of discrimination, remains, the sense of revulsion and attraction will remain, which is the root and branch of samsara.

Desire springs from usage, and aversion from abstention, but the wise man is free from the pairs of opposites like a child, and becomes established.

The passionate man wants to eliminate samsara so as to avoid pain, but the dispassionate man is free from pain and feels no distress even in it.

He who is proud about even liberation or his own body, and feels them his own, is neither a seer nor a yogi. He is still just a sufferer.

If even Shiva, Vishnu or the lotus-born Brahma were your instructor, until you have forgotten everything you cannot be established within.

The liberated man is resplendent everywhere, free from all desires. Everywhere he appears self-possessed and pure of heart.

Seeing, hearing, feeling, smelling, tasting, speaking and walking about, the great souled man who is freed from trying to achieve or avoid anything is free indeed.

The liberated man is free from desires everywhere. He neither blames, praises, rejoices, is disappointed, gives nor takes.

When a great souled one is unperturbed in mind, and equally self-possessed at either the sight of a woman inflamed with desire or at approaching death, he is truly liberated.

There is no distinction between pleasure and pain, man and woman, success and failure for the wise man who looks on everything as equal.

There is no aggression nor compassion, no pride nor humility, no wonder nor confusion for the man whose days of samsara are over.

The liberated man is not averse to the senses and nor is he attached to them. He enjoys himself continually with an unattached mind in both success and failure.

One established in the Absolute state with an empty mind does not know the alternatives of inner stillness and lack of inner stillness, and of good and evil.

A man free of "me" and "mine" and of a sense of responsibility, aware that "Nothing exists", with all desires extinguished within, does not act even in acting. He whose thinking mind is dissolved achieves the indescribable state and is free from the mental display of delusion, dream and ignorance.

The pure man who has experienced the Indescribable attains peace by virtue of his very nature, realising that all this is nothing but illusion, and that nothing is. 18.70

There are no rules, dispassion, renunciation or meditation for one who is pure receptivity by nature, and admits no knowable form of being. 18.71

For him who shines with the radiance of Infinity and is not subject to natural causality there is neither bondage, liberation, pleasure nor pain. 18.72

For the seer who knows himself as imperishable and beyond pain there is neither knowledge, a world nor the sense that I am the body or the body mine. 18.74

No sooner does a man of low intelligence give up activities like the elimination of thought than he falls into mind racing and chatter. 18.75

A fool does not get rid of his stupidity even on hearing the truth. He may appear outwardly free from imaginations, but inside he is still hankering after the senses. 18.76

Though in the eyes of the world he is active, the man who has shed action through knowledge finds no means of doing or speaking anything. 18.77

For the wise man who is always unchanging and fearless there is neither darkness nor light, nor destruction, nor anything. 18.78

There is neither fortitude, prudence nor courage for the yogi whose nature is beyond description and free of individuality. 18.79
There is neither heaven nor hell nor even liberation during life. In a nutshell, in the sight of the seer nothing exists at all.

He neither longs for possessions nor grieves at their absence. The calm mind of the sage is full of the nectar of immortality.

The dispassionate man does not praise the good or blame the wicked. Content and equal in pain and pleasure, he sees nothing that needing doing.

The wise man is not averse to samsara, nor does he seek to know himself. Free from pleasure and impatience, he is not dead and he is not alive.

The wise man excels by being free from anticipation, without attachment to such things as children or wives, free from desire for the senses, and not even concerned about his own body.

The wise man, who lives on whatever happens to come to him, roaming wherever he pleases, and sleeping wherever the sun happens to set, is at peace everywhere.

Whether his body rises or falls, the great souled one gives it no thought, having forgotten all about samsara in coming to rest on the ground of his true nature.

The wise man has the joy of being complete in himself and without possessions, acting as he pleases, free from duality and rid of doubts, and without attachment to any creature.

The wise man excels in being without the sense of "me". Earth, a stone or gold are the same to him. The knots of his heart have been rent asunder, and he is freed from greed and blindness.

The wise man has the joy of being complete in himself and without possessions, acting as he pleases, free from duality and rid of doubts, and without attachment to any creature.
Who can compare with that contented, liberated soul who pays no regard to anything and has no desire left in his heart?

The liberated man is self-possessed in all circumstances and free from the idea of "done" and "still to do". He is the same wherever he is and without greed. He does not dwell on what he has done or not done.

na priiyate vandyamaano nindyamaano na kupyati
He is not pleased when praised nor upset when blamed. He is not afraid of death nor attached to life.

A man at peace does not run off to popular resorts or to the forest. Whatever and wherever, he remains the same.

Janaka
Using the tweezers of the knowledge of the truth I have managed to extract the painful thorn of endless opinions from the recesses of my heart.

For me, established in my own glory, there are no religious obligations, sensuality, possessions, philosophy, duality or even non-duality.

For me established in my own glory, there is no past, future or present. There is no space or even eternity.

For me established in my own glory, there is no self or non-self, no good or evil, no thought or even absence of thought.

For me established in my own glory, there is no dreaming or deep sleep, no waking nor fourth state beyond them, and certainly no fear.

For me established in my own glory, there is nothing far away and nothing near, nothing within or without, nothing large and nothing small.

For me established in my own glory, there is no life or death, no worlds or things of this world, no distraction and no stillness of mind.
For me remaining in myself, there is no need for talk of the three goals of life, of yoga or of knowledge.

Janaka
In my unblemished nature there are no elements, no body, no faculties no mind. There is no void and no despair.

For me, free from the sense of dualism, there are no scriptures, no self-knowledge, no mind free from an object, no satisfaction and no freedom from desire.

There is no knowledge or ignorance, no "me", "this" or "mine", no bondage, no liberation, and no property of self-nature.

For him who is always free from individual characteristics there is no antecedent causal action, no liberation during life, and no fulfilment at death.

For me, free from individuality, there is no doer and no reaper of the consequences, no cessation of action, no arising of thought, no immediate object, and no idea of results.

There is no world, no seeker for liberation, no yogi, no seer, no-one bound and no-one liberated. I remain in my own non-dual nature.

For me who am forever unblemished, there is no assessor, no standard, nothing to assess, and no assessment.

For me who am forever actionless, there is no distraction or one-pointedness of mind, no lack of understanding, no stupidity, no joy and no sorrow.
For me who am always free from deliberations there is neither conventional truth nor absolute truth, no happiness and no suffering. 20.10

For me who am forever pure there is no illusion, no samsara, no attachment or detachment, no living organism, and no God. 20.11

For me who am forever unmovable and indivisible, established in myself, there is no activity or inactivity, no liberation and no bondage. 20.12

For me who am blessed and without limitation, there is no initiation or scripture, no disciple or teacher, and no goal of human life. 20.13

There is no being or non-being, no unity or dualism. What more is there to say? There is nothing outside of me. 20.14
